

Mount Fisher "Star"

Rockie Mountains, B.C., October 1957

Flying Saucers. July-Aug. 1958. p. 82.

---

In October, 1957, I and a friend, Herb Christie (both age 18) attempted to climb Mt. Fisher (9,245 feet) in the main chain of the Rockies. We became stranded about a hundred yards from the summit. Somehow we inched down the cliffs, just as night fell. It was a clear night, and the moon was out. Upon reaching the rock-slide at the foot of the cliffs, we sat down to rest. I noticed an unusually large and reddish "star" above the horizon, and brought it to the attention of my companion. A few minutes afterward, it began to move, slowly at first, then with increasing speed, dropping at a 45° angle behind the horizon. There appeared a red glow where it dropped.
